Why Did We Create an Asset Map?

Asset mapping is a strategic planning tool used to identify and visualize the strengths, resources, and capacities within an ecosystem. Here's why the CREATE Plan asset map will be helpful in strengthening Delaware's creative economy:

- Identifying Resources: Asset maps help to identify the diverse range of assets within a community or system. These assets can include tangible resources such as physical infrastructure, facilities, funding sources, and equipment, as well as intangible assets such as human capital, skills, knowledge, social networks, and cultural heritage.
- Building Community Connections: By visualizing potential connections, the CREATE Plan asset map will enable stakeholders to identify opportunities for partnership and mutual support, leading to more effective and sustainable initiatives.
- Strategic Planning: The CREATE Plan asset map will be able to inform strategic planning processes by providing a comprehensive overview of available resources and strengths. Organizations and local communities can use the asset map to prioritize areas for development, allocate resources more efficiently, and leverage existing assets.
- Promoting Asset-Based Approaches: By emphasizing what communities have rather than what they lack, asset mapping empowers local residents and organizations to take ownership of their development processes and build upon their unique assets.
- Informing Decision-Making: By providing a clear understanding of available resources and capacities, the CREATE Plan asset map will provide valuable insights to stakeholders, including community leaders, policy makers and funders, helping them make well-informed decisions about resource allocation, program design, and collaboration strategies as it relates to Delaware's creative economy.
